Address: ZOOM

Communication Skills and the Power of Positive Thinking Online Via ZOOM

The changes in our lives as we age include many things. There may be challenges in our own mental or physical health or the health of our partner or friends. As we try to communicate with our family and friends about how we are feeling and experiencing all these changes, practicing good communication skills becomes essential. We want to maintain relationships and support to keep them. We want to know how to be sure others understand our needs and ensure we are sensitive to the needs of others. In this workshop we will discuss:

- How to use the "I" message and how it can help with difficult conversations
- What passive, passive-aggressive, aggressive and assertive styles of communication look and feel like when you use them, or someone uses them on you. Understand the consequence when we choose a style to communicate in.

- Why it is important to remember people are not mind-readers
- How to use the power of positivity to improve your mental and physical health

Getting the Most from Your Healthcare Appointment

Date and Time: Monday, March 17 10:00 am - 11:30 am

Communicating well with healthcare providers is one of the most critical parts of getting good care; however, it takes time and effort by both parties. This workshop focuses on what you should be doing before your appointment, what is important to do during your appointment and what should you do after your appointment. Various learning resources are used to prepare and empower individuals to communicate more effectively with their healthcare providers.
